JOURNALISM IN GERMANY.

An amusing side of journalism in Germany comes to light when a newspeeper is confiscated by the government for political reasons. That is, it is amusing to people who have seen the way the thing is done—the owners or publishers of the sonfiscated paper don't look at the funny side of it. The first copy of every newspaper must be sent to the "Staats Anwalt," or public prosecutor, who is the censor of the press laws before him, carefully reads the paper, while he sips his mug of beer. His eye suddenly lights on a passage which criticises adversely an action or a remark of the emperor. He reads it through, and rereads it, and begins to get mad.

"Donnerweiter noch ein mal," he says. "That must be stopped."

He hurriedly draws a blue pencil line around the paragraph and steps up to his telephone. He asks central to connect him with the chief of police. When this functionary is at the other end of the 'phone, Mr. Staats Anwalt orders him to send a squad of police to the printer of the paper, forbid its further publication, and seise all the copies thereof he can lay his hands on. The chief answers "Jawohl," and repeats the order to his assistant. The assistant turns to his "sub" and transmits it to him, who in turn tells his "sub" what is wanted and finally, after a long delay, several policemen start for the office of the paper in a hired flaces. In Germany, when the police are engaged in any special work, they do not ride in the ordinary street cars, nor do they walk, but they must hire a flacre or a coach. This adds secreey and dignity to the affair. When the policemen enter the publication office, they intimidate the trightened foreman into handing over all the copies he has in the place. These are taken down stairs and thrown into the flacre. If there are very many of them, another flacre is called. The printers must take the objectionable matter from the forms, and the police make "pi" of it.

Usually these officers bear a warrant for the arrest of the editor. The German editor has been there before, however, done the police must wreak their vengance on Herr Schmidt, who in most cases is some petty writer on the paper. When he is in jail for writing something which he didn't write, the paper pays him a good salary and looks out for his family. The liberal newspapers and socialistic publications always keep a couple of responsible editors on tap, and when number one is in the lockup the name of number two takes his place in the paper until, through some trouble with the police, number three begins his inning. This functionary is called a sits redakteur, or seat editor. The seat refers to his sojourn in a dungeon. The penalty of the law increases with each offense, and after the unfortunate editor has sat several times a new one is appointed, who starts in with the mildest punishment for the first offense.

The real editor usually gets wind of the intended visit of the police and secretes several copies of the publication. When they arrive, and he has read their letter of authority, he hands over the rest of the papers, which join their companions in the flacre. The officers read to him the warrant for his arrest. When they finish, the editor says:

says:
"Well, meine Herren, I am only a salaried writer here. There stands the responsible editor."
The police scowl at the speaker and march off the responsible editor. It frequently happens that the newspaper has already been sent out and distributed throughout the city, in which case the police must travel around and get hold of all the copies they can office with the case. around and get hold of all the copies they can. They visit every reading room and cafe in the city, and cut the obnoxious paragraph out from paper on the files. In Vienna there are 700 cafes, and one can imagine what a job it is to visit each one and look for the unfortunate newspaper.

While the police are going the rounds of the city, the editor is preparing a second edition omitting the article which provoked the wrath of the Staats Anwalt. In the center of article which provoked the wrath of the Staats Anwalt. In the center of the space this omission naturally cre-ates the word "Confiscated" is usually inserted. A Berlin paper from which a speech had been taken out, read in the second edition:

"The speaker mounted the platform, and began in a clear voice, "Confiscated"—

In Russia publications are confiscated with greater regularity than they are issued. At the frontier towns the foreign newspaper mail is regularly opened and read. When the officials come across something which they think would lower Bussia in the estimation of the reader, to say nothing of political utterances, they have a very effective method of doing away with it. A roller, made for the purpose, is dipped in printer's ink and carefully rubbed over the paragraph, after which the paper is wrapped and sent on to its address. Many a Russian reader of German and American publications has received his paper bearing the black mark. If the officials note that some one person is repeatedly rethat some one person is repeatedly re-ceiving such forbidden articles, they report the fact to St. Petersburg, and the person stands an unenvisible show for Siberia.—New York Sun.

ODDS AND ENDS.

The anti-trust law in Misscuri is to be rigorously enforced by the state authorities.

In the lord mayor's show at London on Nov. 9 among the life savers marched, in full equality of achieve-ment, the dog that recently rescued at Rochdale three little children from a ourning house.

The smallest size solitaire diamond ring was produced in New York last week. The ornament could not be passed over an ordinary pencil, and was made for a museum freak in Hanley.

A hermit, whose previous history is unknown, not even his name, has for a long time occupied alternately as a sleeping place, a couple of caves in the inclosed grounds of the Hermitage, on the south side of Edinburgh. It is not generally known that there are in existence some very spirited ballads by Lord Macaulay which, in accordance with the author's wish, have never been published. The best of them relates the story of Bosworth field.

John Armbruster, of Grafton, W. Va., determined on suicide, took poison, made three attempts to hang himself, cut his throat with a razor, stabbed himself twelve times with a pair of scissors, and finally jumped from the roof of a four story house.

A hair thief is the latest Paris nov elty. He was caught by the police in the act of cutting off a young lady's "pigtail" while she was waiting for an omnibus. On searching his rooms they found a large quantity of hair of all hues.

In view of the statement from Cape

Swimming baths are becoming popular additions to English schools. The school board contends that it is quite as important for a boy to learn to swim as for a girl to learn the art of cookery, and claims that the swimming bath adds to the comfort of the scholars and assists in the work of education.

The emperor of Russia paid all the expenses during his late visit to the king of Denmark. The total amount was something terrific, since, apart from the cost of the entertainment of the immense number of persons who were resident at the schloss, there was a vast outlay in connection with the army of Russian police agents, with whom the whole neighborhood was swarming for two months.

Another royal journal will shortly be published. The empress of Au tria and her youngest daughter, Archduchess Valerie, kept a copious diary during their recent visit to Corfu, which they intend to bring out as "An Autumn in the South." Archduke Franz-Salvator, the archduchess fiance, illustrates the book. Speaking of royal authoresses, Queen Elizabeth of Roumania (Carmen Sylva) is going to publish a collection of novelettes, "Who Knocks?"

The electoral placards which lately disfigured Paris and the provinces were useful even when their original mission was fulfilled. After the final returns in Paris the chiffoniers spent the whole night tearing down the hills, and made a handsome profit by selling them to factories. The bills were then converted into a strong kind of paste-board, from which ingenious manufacturers produced penny dolls, wade for guns and millions of boot buttons. More complete returns from the dis-The electoral placards which lately

More complete returns from the di-tricts in Japan devastated by the Sep-tember floods show that 685 people were drowned and 121 injured. Dur/ ing the year twelve prefectures have been devastated, 2,419 people killed, 155 wounded, and over 80,000 people deprived of means of subsistence. More than 50,000 houses have been swept away or submerged, 150,000 acres of away or submerged, 150,000 acres of crops destroyed, about 6,000 bridges washed away, and some hundreds of miles of road broken up.

The Hottest spot on Earth.

The hottest region on the earth is on the southwestern coast of Persia, where Persia borders the gulf of the same name. For forty consecutive days in the months of July and August, the thermometer has been known not to fall lower than 100 degs., night or day, and to often run up as high as 128 degs. in the afternoon. At Bahrin, in the center of the torrid part of this torrid belt, as though it were nature's intention to make the region as unbearable as possible, no water can be obtained from digging wells 100, 200 or even 500 feet deep, yet a comparatively numerous population contrive to live there, thanks to copious springs which break forth from the bottom of the gulf, more than a mile from shore. which break forth from the bottom of the gulf, more than a mile from shore. The water from these springs is ob-tained by divers, who dive to the bot-tom and fill goatskin bags with the cooling liquid and sell it for a living. The source of these submarine foun-tains is thought to be in the green hill of Osman, some 500 or 600 miles away.—St. Louis Republic.

French chemists have discovered not only a substance which is precisely that which the silkworm exudes, but have found a way of producing this substance in continuous filaments that can be subsequently woven into fabrics that are, to all intents and purposes, silk goods equal to anything made from the silkworm's threads. The artificial silkworm will, if generally introduced, save a vast amount of mulberry leaves, and should eventually make silk as common as calico. The advance of science is sometimes perniciously rapid. Unless it is checked, some savant in the shadow of the Eiffel tower will invent a machine that will turn out sealskin as perfect as that which nature now has a monopoly of, and which is found only upon the bodies of the soft eyed mammal of the sea. And, then, where should the wealthy look for the insignia of midwinter luxury and exclusiveness—Pittaburg Bullstin.
